

THE EDMUND BURKE SOCIETY

“Edmund Burke, Russell Kirk, and Revolution in the Modern Mind.”

Saturday, November 17, 2018. Belmont Abbey College, Belmont, NC.

Keynote speakers: Dr. Vigen Guroian, “Burke and Kirk on Radical Ideology.”
Dr. Wilfred McClay, “A ‘Generous Loyalty’: The Vindication of a

Edmund Burke (1730-97), Irish-born statesman and British parliamentarian, was both a sympathizer with the grievances of colonialist Patriots during the American Revolution and the most eloquent contemporary critic of the French Revolution. His position on each of these transformative events was both influenced by changing understanding of what “revolution” meant and itself helped to shape our modern-day approach to revolutionary thought.

Russell Kirk (1918-94) was one of the twentieth century’s most profound disciples of Burke’s thought, upon which he built a forceful critique of the spread of ideology and secularization in modern society.

This conference explores Russell Kirk’s conclusions and his debt to Edmund Burke in relation to the political and social environment today. Are we progressing toward an ever richer sense of justice and liberty, or must we be more vigilant than ever against becoming victims of the “terrible simplifiers” and ideologues in our midst?
